Dear Mr Finlay

I would be very grateful if you could reiterate information to the parents of your pupils because it seems that some of them are confused by the rules and regulations with regards to Covid. As you are no doubt aware, as education establishments have been sent documentation, that pupils or parents need to self isolate and obtain a Covid test if they have a temperature of 37.8 or above or if they don't have a thermometer that they feel warm to the touch on the chest and the back or if they have a new onset cough (as per the definition from Public Health England) or a loss of sense of taste or smell. I am absolutely sure that you have shared the correct information with the parents but there does appear to be some confusion and I wonder if it might be beneficial to re-relay the information.

Many thanks for your help in this.

Yours sincerely
